Stellar Cyber 6.6.0s is now live! Discover all the updates in the release notes!

Connectors and Integrations Summary

The table below summarizes Stellar Cyber connectors and third party alert integrations and correlates them to assets.

Definitions

The definitions in the table are as follows:

- Connector— A method of collecting information and compiling it into Interflow records that are indexed and stored in the Data Lake. Stellar Cyber develops connectors based on the access methods provided for each external data source, typically an API. These processes run on the Data Processor (DP) to fetch information actively on a scheduled basis. Connectors collect data from external sources and can also respond to actions such as blocking on a firewall or disabling users. The connection to a data source can be configured in Stellar Cyber. For all connectors, see Connector Types & Functions.
- Collect—A function of a connector that collects data from external data sources and adds it to the Data Lake.
- Respond—A function of a connector that takes actions on external data sources in response to detected security events.
- Third party alert integration—The process of ingesting, normalizing, and enriching alerts that are natively created by third party services. These alerts are then mapped to the Stellar Cyber XDR Kill Chain and added to the Alert index. The integration allows for the correlation of third-party native alerts with Stellar Cyber's alerts, leveraging Machine Learning (ML) and Security Analytics (SA) to enhance the alert data. This process includes deduplication to reduce noise. For all third party alert integrations, see Integration of Third Party Native Alerts.
- Detections—The identification of potential threats or risky behavior using various techniques such as Machine Learning (ML) and Security Analytics (SA), as well as rules, and third party alert integration. Detections can be based on known bad behaviors, anomalies, or suspicious activities identified through different methods. These detections generate alerts which are then correlated into cases for further investigation.
- Asset Discovery—The process of identifying assets and tracking assets within a network from observed data using a passive discovery service. This service can discover assets via data collected from various sources such as endpoint data sources (for example, EDR or Directory Services), cloud audit logs, traffic-related sources (for example, firewalls), Stellar Cyber server sensors (Linux and Windows), Stellar Cyber modular sensors, and other log sources or connectors. The discovered assets can include both IP and MAC addresses, which are associated with hosts. This process happens in real time as new data comes into the system, and the unique assets are counted daily. The discovered data is then used to analyze the behavior of these assets to detect security events.

Legend

The columns in the table are as follows:

- Connector Name—The name of the connector in alphabetic order, and a link to the document
- Connector Category—The category to which the connector belongs
- Integration Function—The function of the integration:
    - Collect—only collect
    - Respond—only respond
    - Collect, Respond—both collect and respond
    - Third party—third party alert integration
- Third Party Alert Integration Name—The name of the third party alert integration and a link to the document
- Third Party Based On—What the third party alert integration is based on:
    - connector, and if there is a specific content type that needs to be configured, as well as the msg_class
    - parser, and if there is a specific format, such as CEF

    - Windows agent
- Detections—What to enter in the Stellar Cyber Detections & Response pa (https://detections.stellarcyber.ai/v/6.6.0) in the Select Applications field to produce a list of detections and third party alert integrations supported for a data source
- Asset Discovery—Whether the data source sends assets to the Assets index
